PARENT-TEACHER MEETING HELD

Good Crowd Gathers at Auditorium to Hear Dr. Clem Davies Lecture on "The Home"

The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association was held in the Auditorium theatre on Tuesday evening, January 20. There was a good attendance of members and friends who were interested in the first meeting of the New Year.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "O Canada." The president, Mr. Holdridge, was in the chair and gave a short address on the work and objects of the association, as well as the progress being made. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mr. N. E. Watts, in the absence of the secretary, Miss Jean McNaught. It was moved by Mrs. Gilman and seconded by Mr. Creighton that the minutes be adopted as read.

A very interesting program then followed, opening with a duet by Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Creighton and a solo by Mr. Creighton accompanied by Mrs. B. Deacon.

The next item was a very interesting address on "The Home," by Dr. Clem Davies, from Victoria, of whom we have all read, and perhaps heard on the radio but few have heard in person.

Mr. Davies spoke of his firm belief that the training of the child in the home had the shaping of its whole future. He pointed out from statistics the large number of those in prisons and reformatories who had no home training or were neglected in the home, or perhaps never knew what "home life" was. He believes there is wonderful work going on in the school, where the teachers strive

The illustrations show the wonderful work being done by nurses of the health centre among the children of South Saanich, and it is hoped that a large attendance will be on hand to hear what Mrs. Lucas has to say on this very interesting subject, and to decide for themselves whether or not it would be a good thing for North Saanich as well.

All those living in the district are cordially invited to attend. There will be no admission charge, but a collection will be taken to defray the expenses of the hall.

STAR SCRUBS AND COOKS AS NEW HERO TYPE TO WIN INDEPENDENCE

Richard Barthelmess gives Screen an Innovation with His Latest Delineation—First Time Star Has Appeared in Modern Role Since "Fury"

Richard Barthelmess not only portrays the role of a New York taxi-cab driver in his latest inspiration starring vehicle, "Twenty-One," but he also keeps house and scrubs his own clothes in this modern screen drama, which will be the first national attraction at the Auditorium theatre Friday and Saturday.

In this film, which is described as one of the most ambitious yet undertaken by the popular star, Dick comes back to the screen in the first modern part he has played since "Fury." In the interim he has made two period costume dramas, "The Bright Shawl," laid in Cuba in the 1850's, and "The Fighting Blade," a story of the Cromwellian era in England.

The production, which was made under the direction of John S. Robertson, is said to be a strong rival to Dick's successful picturization of Joseph Hergestheimer's Kentucky mountain story, "Tolable David."

Life Is Unhappy

In "Twenty-One" Barthelmess is to be seen as the 19-year-old son of wealthy parents whose unhappy marital life has an unwholesome effect on their boy. He rebels at the artificiality and the selfishness that pervades his home and social life and finds pleasure in the society of a factory girl.

His secret meetings, motor rides and dances with this girl continue and in time he finds that he loves her. Discovery of this romance results in his mother's plan to send him away to a ranch and his father's effort to bring about the marriage of the girl to a former suitor.

Julian McCullough (that's Dick) takes matters into his own hands by running away to New York with the intention of keeping in hiding until he is of age and legally entitled to wed whomever he chooses, but before going he gets the consent of Yinnie to wait for him. In New York he gets employment as a taxi-cab driver, sharing a tenement apartment with another chap of that calling. It's a hard struggle, for he cooks his own meals, does the "family" washing and carries on light housekeeping generally. And cruising through the streets of Manhattan in his cab, he bumps into an exciting adventure that puts a new twist into his romantic experiences.

Palatial Estate

Many of the scenes for this story were filmed in a palatial estate which is one of the show places of aristocratic Westchester County, while others depict a certain East Side section of New York City where it is said to be "unhealthy" to go around alone at night with large sums of money.

An interesting feature of the story is said to be the breaking up and capture of a band of automobile thieves, and in this roundup Barthelmess engages in a fierce battle with the thugs, during which he is stabbed.

An unusually fine cast surrounds Dick in "Twenty-One." Dorothy Mackall, who distinguished herself by her work in Barthelmess' preceding vehicle, "The Fighting Blade," is once more to be seen as his leading lady in the role of Lynnie Willis, the little factory girl.

Joe King, long favorite among movie fans, plays the part of Dick's father, while Dorothy Cumming is to be seen as his screen mother.

Elsie Lawson, late of the Follies, is to be seen as a society flapper, whose efforts to vamp the young hero of the story are unavailing, and Bradley Barker, another well-known favorite of both stage and screen, has the part of the rejected Polish suitor for the hand of Lynnie Willis.

Ivan Simpson and Nellie Parker Spaulding portray Mr. and Mrs. Willis, parents of Lynnie, while Helen Tracy and other well-known players fill out the cast. The scenario for "Twenty-One" was prepared by Josephine Lovett.

CANADIAN STEEL PURCHASED

"The Canadian National Railways purchase in Canada all steel used by the system in the Dominion," declared Sir Henry Thornton, president of the C.N.R., in an address a few days ago to the Sydney, N.S., Board of Trade, in response to a request that further orders for steel be placed as soon as possible with the steel company of Sydney. Sir Henry added that this policy is one which the National Railways propose to adhere to, and gave the promise that as much steel as their circumstances would permit would be ordered from that section of the country, but that the other companies in Canada manufacturing the same product must receive equal consideration in the matter.

PARENT-TEACHERS' MEETING

to give education and learning to the boys and girls, but explains that too much is left to the teachers, a great deal of training that should be given in the home is expected in the schools—where the children spend but a few hours each day. He also spoke of children as imitators, and gave this as a reason for setting a good example to the child in the home.

Mr. Davies, in speaking of the great rush that had been to the south during the last few years and prosperity they have enjoyed said that he believed it was gradually working north along the coast and was bound to come our way, and it such times came the parents should think well of the "home life" of their children.

Comic songs were then contributed by Mr. Gillespie and a vote of thanks extended to Dr. Davies for coming to Sidney by Col. Peck, V.C., M.P.C., who also gave a short talk on the work of the Parent-Teachers' Association and the effect of the public school on the life of the child.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

"Child's Eyelids Inflamed Stuck Together and Bled"

Mr. E. P. Kimball, Entwistle, Alta., writes: "Our little girl from birth was troubled with inflamed eyelids and in spite of several remedies, grew worse until at the age of sixteen months her eyes could not be opened after sleep without bleeding, a waxy discharge sticking the lids together and adhering with great tenacity. The child's grandmothers were consulted by mail, and both responded with a little sample box of Dr. Chase's Ointment. These were used as directed, and lasted until we could obtain a further supply from Edmonton. Improvement was very marked from the first application. The waxy discharge was easier removed and did not reappear. Inflammation subsided and has not returned."

"Can you?" he asked, and even as he asked he saw that a change had come over the young Prince's mood. He was no longer oppressed with envy and discontent. He was leaning forward with parted lips and a look in his eyes which Hatch had not seen that evening—a look as if hope had somehow dared to lift its head within him. And there was more than a look of hope; there was savagery too.

"No. I want to hear," replied Shere Ali. "Go on, please! How did the Englishwoman come to Mecca?"

"She was governess in the family of an officer at Cawnpore when the Mutiny broke out, more than 40 years ago," said Hatch.

Ralston leaned back in his chair with an exclamation of horror. Shere Ali said nothing. His eyes rested intently and brightly upon Hatch's face. Under the table, and out of sight, his fingers worked convulsively.

"She was in that room," continued Hatch, "in that dark room with the other Englishwomen and children who were murdered. But she was spared. She was very pretty, she told me, in her youth, and she was only 18 when the massacre took place. She was carried up to the hills and forced to become a Mohamadan. The man who had spared her married her. He died, and a small chieftain in the hills took her and married her, and finally brought her out with him when he made the pilgrimage to Mecca. While he was at Mecca, however, he fell ill, and in his turn he died. She was left alone. She had a little money, and she stayed. Indeed, she could not get away. A strange story, eh?"

And Hatch leaned back in his chair, and once more lighted his cigar, which for a second time had gone out.

"You didn't bring her back?" exclaimed Ralston.

"She wouldn't come," replied Hatch. "I offered to smuggle her out of Mecca, but she refused. She felt that she wouldn't and couldn't face her own people again. She should have died at Cawnpore, and she did not die. Besides, she was old; she had long since grown accustomed to her life, and in England she had long since been given up for dead. She would not even tell me her real name. Perhaps she ought to be fetched away. I don't know."

Ralston and Hatch fell to debating that point with great earnestness. Neither of them paid heed to Shere Ali, and when he rose they easily left him go. Nor did their thoughts follow him upon his way. But he was thinking deeply as he went, and a queer and not very pleasant smile played about his lips.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Sybil Linforth's Loyalty

A fortnight after Shere Ali had dined with Ralston in Calcutta, a telegram was handed to Linforth at Chatham. It was Friday, and a guest-night. The mess room was full, and here and there amongst the scarlet and gold lace the sombre black of a civilian caught the eye. Dinner was just over, and at the ends of the long tables the mess-waiters stood ready to draw, with a single jerk, the strips of white tablecloth from the shining mahogany. The silver and the glasses had been removed, the word was given, and the strips of tablecloth vanished as though by some swift legerdemain. The port was passed round, and while the glasses were being filled the telegram was handed to Linforth by his servant.

He opened it carefully, but as he read the words his heart jumped within him. His anticipations had succeeded, he thought. At all events, his opportunity had come; for the telegram informed him of his appointment to the Punjab Commission. He sat for a moment with his thoughts in a whirl. He could hardly believe the good news. He had longed so desperately for this one chance that it had seemed to him of late impossible that he should ever obtain it. Yet here it had come to him. And upon that his neighbor jogged him in the ribs and said:

"Wake up!"

He woke to see the Colonel at the centre of the top table standing on his feet with his glass in his hand.

"Gentleman, the Queen. God bless her!" and all that company arose and drank to the toast. The prayer, thus simply pronounced amongst the men who had pledged their lives in service to the Queen, had always been to Linforth a very moving thing. Some of those who drank to it had already run their risks and borne their sufferings in proof of their sincerity; the others all but of to do the like. It had always seemed to him, too, to link him up closely and inseparably with the soldiers of the regiment who had fallen years ago or had died quietly in their beds, their service ended. It gave continuity to the regiment of Sappers, so that what each man did increased or tarnished its fair fame. For years back that toast had been drunk, that prayer uttered in just those simple words, and Linforth went to gaze round the walls on the portraits of the famous generals who had looked to these barracks and to this mess-room as their home. They, too, had heard that prayer, and, carrying it in their hearts, without parade or needless speech had gone forth, each in his turn, and labored unspiringly.

But never had Linforth been so moved as he was tonight. He coked in his tarot as he drank. For his turn to go forth had at the last come to him. And in all humility of spirit he sent up a prayer on his own account, that he might not fail—and again that he might not fail.

He sat down and told his companions the good news, and rejoiced at their congratulations. But he slipped away to his own quarters very quietly as soon as the Colonel rose, and sat late by himself.

There was one, he knew very well, to whom the glad tidings would be a heavy blow—but he could not—no, not even for her sake—stand aside. For this opportunity he had lived, training alike his body and mind against its coming. He could not relinquish it. There was too strong a constraint upon him.

"Over the passes to the foot of the Hindu Kush," he murmured; and in his mind's eye he saw the Road—a broad, white, graded road, snake across the valleys and climb the cliffs.

Was Russia at work? he wondered. Was he to be sent to Chitilstan? What was Shere Ali doing? He turned the questions over in his mind without being at much pains to answer them. In such a very short time now he would know. He was to embark travelled a month had passed.

He travelled down the very next day into Sussex, and came to the house under the Spring, and as yet there were no buds upon the trees, no daffodils upon the lawns. The house, standing apart in its bare garden of brown earth, black trees, and dull-green turf, had a desolate aspect which somehow filled him with remorse. He might have done more, perhaps, to fill his house with happiness. He feared that now it was too late to do the things left undone. He had been so absorbed in his great plans, which for a moment lost in his eyes their magnitude.

Dick Linforth found his mother in the study, through the window of which she had once looked from the garden in the company of Colonel Dawes. She was writing her letters, and when she saw him enter, she sprang up with a cry of joy.

"Dick," she cried, coming towards him with outstretched hands. But she stopped half-way. The happiness died out of her. She raised a hand to her heart, and her voice once more repeated his name; but her voice faltered as she spoke, and the hand was clasped tight upon her breast.

"Dick," she said, and in his face she read the tidings he had brought. The blow so long dreaded had at last fallen.

"Yes, mother, it's true," he said very gently; and leading her to a chair, he sat beside her, stroking her hand, almost as a lover might do. "It's true. The telegram came last night. I start within the month."

"For Chitilstan?"

Dick looked at her for a moment.

"For the Punjab," he said, and added: "But it will mean Chitilstan. Also why should I be sent for? It has been always for Chitilstan that I have importuned them."

Sybil Linforth bowed her head. The horror which had been present with her night and day for so long a while 25 years ago rushed upon her afresh, so that she could not speak. She sat living over again the bitter days when Luffe was shut up with his handful of men in the fort by Kohara. She remembered the morning when the postman came up the garden path with the official letter that her husband had been slain. And at last in a whisper she said:

"The Road?"

Dick, in the presence of her pain, could not deny the implication of her words.

"We Linforths belong to the Road," he answered gravely. The words struck upon a chord of memory. Sybil Linforth sat upright, turned her son and greatly surprised him. He had expected an appeal, a prayer. What he heard was something which raised her higher in his thoughts than ever she had been, high though he had always placed her.

"Dick," she said. "I have never said to dissuade you, have I? Never a word? Never a single word?" and her tone besought him to assure her.

"Never a word, mother," he replied.

But still she was not content.

"When you were a boy, when the Road began to take hold on you—when we were much together, playing cricket out there in the garden," and her voice broke upon the memory of those golden days, when I might have been able, perhaps, to turn you to other thoughts, I never tried. Dick? Own to that! I never tried. When I came upon you up on the top of the Down behind the house, lying on the grass, looking out—oh, I knew very well what it was that was drawing you; but I said nothing. Dick. Not a word—not a word!"

Dick nodded his head.

Flivver Sam

Apparently the reckless autoists of this country have not applied the newer slogan to themselves: "Watch Your Step" (on it).

Things have gotten so lately the old man has to ask the children two or three days ahead if he can borrow the car.

They can remove knocking from automobile engines, but, a local driver says it can't be removed from the back seat when the wife is along.

Funeral March, Please

There was a man in our town, And he was a speedy guy, He turned the corners on two wheels, Crossed crossings on the fly. But the other day, the extras say, This wise man saw the light, His flivver stalled on the railroad track— Toot, toot! Ding, dong! Good Night!

Old-fashioned courting couples pulled down the shades; modern couples put the curtains up.

A strange feature of the grade-crossing situation is that the railroad companies seem bent upon keeping us all from being killed, while we all don't seem to mind whether we are or not.

Did he die a natural death? Yes, he was run over in the street.

Miss Matthews, while instructing a Sunday school class, asked the children the meaning of the "quick and the dead." This seemed to puzzle them somewhat, but suddenly one small boy piped out: "Please ma'am, the man as gets out of the way of the motor car is quick, and 'im as doesn't is dead."

Sam Parker thinks the most dangerous thing about a motor car is the driver.

Famous last words: Well, if he don't dim his, I won't dim mine.

Let Your Banker Collect It

If you wish to collect a debt from a party in another section, you can have your banker draw a draft on him at sight or for a given time. This will be presented through his local banker as request for payment from you. When your draft is paid it is turned over to the payer. It is his receipt for an account paid.

This is only one of the numerous ways in which the Bank of Montreal can be of service to its customers.

Jimmy Wakefield says maybe the "stop" signs on pavements is that regular painters won't take the risk of being run over or shot.

People who haven't time to find a grade-crossing manage to stop to attend the funeral.

Why don't they put the scenery in the automobiles, asks W. H. Dawes, then we could sit on our piazzas and watch it go by!

Well, says Neil MacAulay, at least when Ford has all the money we can use Ford parts as a medium of exchange.

It is easy to get 20 miles out of a gallon, but Earl McKenzie says it takes a careful man to get 20 miles out of a pair of socks.

A Big Job in Housekeeping for Globe Circumnavigators

BOOT-BLACKING and polishing as a steady diet is to most people more objectionable than dishwashing. Yet there are some who take a pride and pleasure in this occupation and actually shine in it. A little blacking goes a long way and gives a high polish, but knowing even this, the bootblack on the Empress of France, now stocking up for the round-the-world cruise she will commence on leaving New York January 15th did not quail when he saw a hundred-weight of boot polish being run off the gang plank for him. As a matter of fact he beamed. Each task is but a means to an end and although he may be called upon to see that many square miles of shoes are shined, he will have an opportunity of wiping the dust of many lands from them, and seeing something of these lands beside. His office was sought after, as were all others on the ship.

But dealing with huge figures, one would think that at least the chef on this giant Canadian Pacific Steamship would be to some extent awed by what is before them. Think, Madame Housewife, of having to prepare 185,000 pounds of vegetables, of having to roast 53,000 pounds of beef, 37,000 pounds of lamb, 30,150 pounds of other fresh meats and 2,750 pounds of sausages. Would it not tend to take some of the joy out of a four month cruise? Yet this is the task of the stewards' department of the Empress. Supposing that with the necessary assistance you had to prepare 12,000 pounds of chickens, 7,000 of capons, 4,000 of ducklings, 2,000 of geese, 8,000 of turkeys, 2,300 of guinea fowl, pigeons, quail, etc., and innumerable game fowl for the table on route; would you be so keen on your trip?

All joking apart, the unattached young ladies who figure on the passenger list will be entitled to know that the aggregate weight of the nuts aboard totals 16,000 pounds, and the unattached young men will be equally pleased to learn that on all the ship there are only 40 cases of lemons. But the little boys! It will indeed go hard with them. For some hard hearted purchasing agent, with no little boys of his own, had ordered 16,650 tablets of toilet soap, 17,700 pounds of soft soap, 55 gallons of liquid salt water soap, and two tons of scouring soap, and soap powder! He thinks that 6,000 Polar Bears and Esquimaux Men are going to compensate for all this!

It seems that Dad has been looking after very well. Canadian Pacific cruise officers tell us that for the round-the-world trip of the Empress of France, some 53,170 bottles of various shapes and sizes have been taken aboard, and in addition 51,700 bottles of mineral water.

A few other outstanding figures in connection with the four months supply for the 450 or 500 passengers are as follows: 750 cases of Canadian apples, 250 cases of grape fruit, 26 barrels of grapes, 500 pounds of dates, 890 lobsters and crabs, 20,000 pounds of fresh fish, 3,864 pounds of coffee, 30,150 pounds of sugar, 2,280 of tea, 250 gallons of oil, 5,600 pounds of salt, 1,780 bottles of sauce, 120,000 pounds of flour, 10,000 pounds of butter, 22,550 pounds of lard and ham, 50,000 drinking straws, 43,000 menu cards—and so on. Fresh fruits, vegetables, fish, milk and eggs will be purchased in considerable quantities to meet requirements as the cruise progresses. Fifteen thousand, four hundred tons of fuel oil will be used by the cruising steamer.

SIDNEY, B.C., THURSDAY, JAN. 22, 1925.

GREAT PROGRESS IN SIGHT

With the announcement from Ottawa that railway connection will be made with the famous Peace River district and the Pacific coast and that same will be rushed to completion as soon as the most suitable route has been determined by engineers of the C.N.R. and C.P.R., jointly, Western Canada will see one of the greatest movements in history.

The Peace River country is a sure crop district and this means a great deal when farmers are contemplating settling in any district. Sufficient rainfall and long bright summer days result in wonderful yields in all grain crops. But this has been to little avail owing to the very long haul to Port Arthur and Fort William, the freight rates being too high to allow any profit to the producer.

It is now proposed to get right down to business and make connections westward to the Pacific coast, and it is figured that such railroad connection will mean a saving of at least 10 cents a bushel to the farmer—which in most cases is the difference between profit and loss.

The most powerful influence to bring the East to their senses and to decide to build this much-needed link in transportation has been the fact that hundreds of hardy pioneers have, in the last few years, been leaving the Peace River country—simply because it did not pay owing to the tremendous cost of marketing through Eastern trade channels.

The Vancouver Sun deserves considerable credit for persistently agitating for the construction of the necessary connecting link and boosting the fertile Peace River country.

It is estimated that over 1,000,000 farmers can find suitable land for wheat-raising without great cost of preparation. There is said to be 20,000,000 acres practically ready for the plow, while many millions more can be brushed at reasonable cost.

Vancouver is in a position to reap a great "harvest" in business once this movement starts, having elevators already built and more under construction, and main-line railway connection by C.N.R. However, the influx of settlers will benefit the whole of Canada indirectly and Prince Rupert is bound to become one of the largest cities on the Pacific coast in time. Vancouver may have the elevators to start with but Prince Rupert will forge to the front with a bound—for two reasons: One—Prince Rupert is hundreds of miles closer to the Orient, where wheat is ever increasing in demand. Two—The rail haul to Prince Rupert is considerably less. Another reason might be mentioned: the great volume of grain could not possibly be handled without congestion on the main-line to Vancouver if all the grain from the Peace River district were added to the already huge volume now pouring in from the prairies.

This movement will affect every line of business on the British Columbia coast as well as inland. Grain will not only come out, but supplies in the line of agricultural implements, lumber, hardware, clothing, furniture, etc., must go in. Shipping will increase, more traffic will help the railways and give more employment, manufacturers will branch out, new towns will spring up, new discoveries in minerals are sure to take place—in fact the possibilities to which this movement may lead are beyond one's imagination. The future of the West is bound to be of increasing interest to the world in general as time goes on.

A BIG DOCK FOR SIDNEY?

There has been considerable talk about the Canadian Pacific building a big dock and breakwater here. It was even reported that the sum of at least $100,000 was to be spent for this purpose. Now a new angle pops up, whether there is anything to it or not it is hard to say. One can get about as much information from railway officials as the proverbial claim. At any rate it is known that certain Canadian National officials have been to Sidney "looking things over." Does the C.N.R. contemplate getting in on the heavy tourist traffic coming here next summer?

Sidney at present has three Dominion government docks, one at the foot of Second Street, one at the foot of Beacon Avenue, another at Roberts' Bay. Roberts' Bay is well protected and may be the main port as it is said that with dredging large ships could be accommodated.

HAS FAITH IN SIDNEY

Mr. John Matthews, well-known contractor and builder, evidently has faith in Sidney when he is putting up a large new hall at his own expense. With such men, who have lived here for years, showing the way, the future looks bright for this town. More power to ye John.

Several new houses are to be built this spring in Sidney and the surrounding district. Another proof that Sidney is forging ahead.

NOTES BY THE WAY

By OBSERVER

The city of Victoria is apt to lose her Ladyship Ursus Kermodei, the little white bear captured on Princess Royal Island. The city wishes to keep the little bear, but does not desire to go to any expense over it. It has again been handed over to the custody of the Game Board by the Courts, and more than likely will go to Vancouver. Thus Vancouver will score another victory, through the niggardly action of the city council of our capital city. No doubt if the little bear was offered to Sidney, we could raise enough money to build a suitable pen for it and feed it. It would be a great attraction to have in our auto park, and no doubt some one would volunteer to care for it. It is a pity that there should be so much ado about practically nothing, but taxes have to be cut, even if you have to slight your best friend. The writer has been acquainted with several black and brown bears which have been captive, sometimes. At other times they roamed all over the property they were at home on, and had a good time, and did no damage. They were very cunning and affectionate, and were always ready to play jokes on the human, if they had a chance. As Ursus Kermodei seems to be of a small species, more than likely she would be of a very playful nature. If the aldermen of our capital do not want the little animal, lots of other places do, and she will be sure of a home. But, better still, take her back to Princess Royal Island.

Our Sidney poultry keepers are to be congratulated upon their showing in the present poultry contest at the Experimental Farm. If the present high pen keeps up their stride, they will be hard to overtake.

The Canadian Fisheries Association is working to advertise the Canadian fish and convert people to using it. They are now distributing from their Montreal office a recipe book telling how to cook fish. This book is issued by the Department of Fisheries, Ottawa, and all housewives should have a copy.

While we are shivering with the cold and telling our experiences with frozen pipes, Quebec and Banff is overrun with tourists. Winter sports are in full swing, and the Yankees from the south of us find the exhilarating weather to their liking. The C.P.R. is rebuilding Chateau Lake Louise with an eye to winter tourist business.

Certain people in mining circles in Vancouver are trying to start an agitation to close our mining areas to foreigners, especially those below our southern boundary line. This may be all right in theory, but as long as our own merchants and monied men are afraid to take a chance, people from outside our own country are going to take all the plums. The reported strike in the Cassiar district has led to this move, but from all appearances none of our merchants are getting ready to handle supplies for any rush that may ensue. If we are to have the natural resources of our country for our own use, we must be the first on the ground, and work as hard as we can to show that we mean business. It is no good to make motions, pass resolutions, etc., we must get busy ourselves. If we want the phone, we must get busy. If we only want "pap" from the various governments, we should remain as we are. It would be a pity to see another such rush as the Klondike one, and have Seattle or some Yankee town get all the trade, but it will happen again if we do not wake up.

Mr. John Matthews is to be congratulated on his enterprise in starting another hall. The small hall already in use is proving a boon for small gatherings, and with the large one in use for basketball, badminton, tennis, Sidney should have no dearth of winter sports. The district of Sidney contains some of the best basketball players in the southern part of the island, but they have to go outside to get an opportunity to play. We have also some good material for tennis players, if they get a chance to practice during the winter. It is to be hoped that as Mr. Matthews is public spirited enough to tackle alone what the whole community has balked at he will have the support of all our citizens.

The Sidney Social Club has undertaken to cater to the younger people by giving a series of dances and other entertainments during the winter for their benefit. A small charge is being made, in order to try and make these self-supporting. No doubt many will now follow their lead, as the way has been paved, and the dances held have been well attended.

Here and There

That Hollanders who have located in Alberta are making good and are satisfied is the statement of Baron W. Van Heeckeren, of Rotterdam, after a recent tour of investigation.

The forming of a mining bureau as a branch of its activities is announced by the Winnipeg Board of Trade. The bureau is to collect data on the mining situation in the province and will do everything possible to foster greater mineral production in Manitoba.

Tourist traffic in Canada this year is likely to constitute a new record, in the opinion of the Commissioner of Parks. No estimate has been compiled as yet but the figures for 1923, which were carefully estimated at $138,000,000, indicate the value of this traffic to the Dominion.

Up to the end of October, 1924, more than 1,000 circulating libraries were in operation in Saskatchewan, as compared with about 800 at the same time in 1923. The average number of families reading each book is 17. More than half a million volumes were circulated by these libraries during the year.

A huge wooden, tar-paper lined shell erected over the space provided for the structure and heated by thousands of feet of steam coils connected with 380-horse power boilers, which provide a summer-like atmosphere for the carrying on of construction, is an interesting and novel feature of the arrangements made to combat the difficulty of building the new wing of the Chateau Lake Louise, the Canadian Pacific Railway's famous Rocky Mountain hotel, under winter conditions. Thanks to this innovation, the wing, despite frequent drops in temperature to far below zero, is progressing excellently and the company expects it to be ready for next summer's tourist season.

Sweeping changes in the Canadian Pacific Railway's service of great benefit to the communities concerned are scheduled for January 11. They include revision of the timetable of the Vancouver express (Toronto-Vancouver), to reach Fort William and Port Arthur between 10 and 11 p.m., instead of 2 and 3 a.m., and Winnipeg at 10 a.m., instead of 2:30 p.m., as heretofore. The new times are more convenient to the Twin Cities than the old and a half-day is gained for business in Winnipeg. Regina is to be reached by the same train at 11 p.m. instead of 1:20 a.m., and Moose Jaw at midnight instead of 2:45 a.m., Regina-Saskatoon connections being thus radically improved, while arrival at Calgary at 4 p.m. enables Edmonton to be reached that evening. Vancouver is reached at 7 p.m. instead of 9:30 p.m. as previously. The Toronto Express (Vancouver-Toronto) reaches Winnipeg more conveniently, while arrival at Toronto at 8:40 a.m. will make possible connections with early morning trains for Ontario points and with day trains for American cities, thus saving more time. Gains on other trains between Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Chicago and Winnipeg are also scheduled. These arrangements follow the cancellation of the recently inaugurated train between Winnipeg, Montreal and Toronto, which is to come off January 10.

EATING

Although the Irish and the Dutch are quite inclined to eat too much, and Yankees hardly seem to me as lunked as they used to be, no dame or gent has ever flourished who was not adequately nourished. We should be frequently employed in filling up our usual void. When I go forth with well-filled looks due to the grub that Hannah cooks, no baker's window tempts me high, however flush with cake and pie. But going hungry home at noon each bun and biscuit seems a boon. I seek the store and buy a stack, each in its portly paper sack. If o'er by chance, when home I landed, fair Hannah saw me empty-handed, she'd know my appetite was straggled. All men who study such things know that in the human embryo the earliest scene of our life act is shaping our digestive tract. When Mother Nature puts the rest in she hangs it round that large intestine. The stomach forms our centre, though, in lots of people that we know, it's some circumference also. Whatever else in life befalls us three times a day our hunger calls us, and often too this hard is seen to take a little snack between.

—BOB ADAMS.

CULLING POULTRY FOR BREEDING

By D. G. DENNY

(Experimental Station, Summerland)

It is by selecting for desired characteristics that real results in poultry breeding are obtained. There are numerous characteristics that poultry breeders desire, but the most important are vigor and health, egg production, egg size, and breed type.

Vigor is the main essential of these, because without it there can only be failure in all other respects. After culling out the less vigorous birds in the flock the next step is the selection of birds that have the other desirable characteristics. Breeding from the highest producers each spring will not result in all the daughters laying, say, 200 eggs or more a year, but it can be expected that the flock average will increase considerably above what it would have been had the breeding been indiscriminate. It is possible, with a fair degree of accuracy, to cull hens of the yellow-fleshed varieties immediately following a period of heavy production when the poor layers will be yellow in flesh, shank, beak and eyering, compared with the good layers which are using all surplus fat for egg production.

In conjunction with culling it will be found that the poor layers are round-bodied, loose feathered, and of a sluggish disposition; while the heavy producers are slab-sided, deep-bodied, and alert, with a full red comb and wattles. Early moulters are generally low producers.

With the male—the member that constitutes half the flock—great care must be taken when selecting from a production standpoint to see that he is from known high producing ancestry and that he is showing the finest breed characteristics and egg type, such as, depth of body, length and width of back, smooth, well-shaped head, and bright eye.

Birds should be well fed and comfortably housed, and given plenty of range if possible, in order to obtain the best breeding results.

As a rule 2 hens to one male will be sufficient in a pen mated up the first of February for hatching in the last week of March which is early enough in this district.

THE FLAPPER

Little Marjorie was making her first visit to her grandmother's farm. With wide-open eyes she had viewed the chickens and the cows, and on the way back to the farmhouse met up with a big turkey which strutted toward her with its feathers all extended. The grandmother and family expected an outcry of fear from the child, but Marjorie merely remarked in tones of reproach: "Oh you great big chicken, leave me alone, and pull your clothes down."

Passenger Man Appointed to Railway Executive

W. B. HOWARD

W. B. Howard, whose appointment as General Executive Assistant has been announced by E. W. Beatty, Chairman and President of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Howard, who has been Assistant General Passenger Agent, succeeds R. L. Wanklyn, whose retirement was announced at the end of the year.

Mr. Howard is one of the younger of the Company's officials although he entered its service twenty-five years ago. Born in Chatham, N.B., he joined the Canadian Pacific forces as junior clerk at St. John, N.B., in 1897, and two years later was promoted to the position of travelling passenger agent. Since that time his promotion has been rapid and he is well known throughout the east as a very competent officer. On two occasions Mr. Howard has been in charge of the train placed at the service of the Prince of Wales by the Canadian Pacific.

RAMBLINGS

By the "Rambler"

"The only people, scientific or other, who never make mistakes are those who do nothing."

—Thomas Henry Huxley.

Eastern Manufacturers' Association complain that smuggling is being carried on extensively in Canada. It is alleged that rum-runners carry loads of liquor from Canada to the U.S.A. and return with textile goods. It does not appear that objection is taken to the export of the liquor to the U.S.A.

The civic elections for mayors, Reeves, aldermen, councillors, trustees, commissioners, are over again once more. In the southern end of Vancouver Island the electors have made many changes. It is apparent that the desire is growing for closer co-operation between the several parts. No one organization has done more to promote this than the Victoria Chamber of Commerce. Greater Victoria as an actual fact is coming and will be an accomplished reality in the very near future.

The visit of Mrs. Philip Snowden to Victoria this week is of considerable interest. She is not only notable as the wife of the late Chancellor of the Exchequer of Great Britain, the Right Honorable Philip Snowden, M.P., but is herself an active member of the British Labor party, has travelled the world, is an author of several works. Her speeches in Canada have aroused much interest in the Old Country.

The suggestion of conferring a title upon Mr. H. H. Asquith has again been revived. While it is true that in a few notable instances, such as Morley and Balfour, prominent politicians have been translated to the Upper House, yet there exists in Great Britain a great reluctance to accept such promotion; it is not popular. Gladstone, Campbell-Bannerman, Chamberlain and many others could have received titles, but preferred to remain plain "Mr."

The Provincial Police force of B.C. are to be congratulated on their recent successes in rounding-up some of the notorious criminals who have been operating in these parts during the past year or two. The police are often found fault with for their apparent failure in putting down crime and it is pleasant to note their successes. It is to be hoped that these men will be brought here and receive their due reward.

It has been decided to construct another tunnel under the River Thames in order to relieve the congestion of London's street traffic, the cost will be $15,000,000 and it will take three years to build. Traffic continues to be one of London's great problems. Town-planners 2,000 years ago did not have big enough vision, apparently.

Mr. J. A. Shanks, one of Victoria city's new aldermen, generally known as "Five Points" Shanks, has gained success in securing the construction of a new home for Ursus Kermode. The Rambler has long had the opinion that development in Beacon Park along unutilized lines would be good publicity. Good work Alder man Shanks, "carry on."

V. G. Foss, alias Foster, was charged with obtaining money by false pretenses and convicted before Magistrate H. C. Shaw, who gave him six months with hard labor. A representative of this man was operating in Sidney and North Saanich last week, selling a copy of the so-called poem by Foss, actually a mutilation of John McCracken's "In Flander Fields." The public should assist the police and refuse their support to this unlawful beggar. The Dominion of Canada has spent millions for her returned soldiers, and there are the proper agencies to take care of needy cases.

Saanichton News

(Review Correspondent)

SAANICHTON, B.C., Jan. 22.

Basketball is again to the fore. Two thrilling games took place at the Agricultural hall on Saturday evening when Saanichton defeated two good teams from Victoria. The first game was with St. Andrew's, the locals triumphing them to the tune of 51-33, Jack and Mike Lannan doing sterling work, netting 14 apiece.

The B. G. Prior crew were the next victims, the locals putting it all over them like a tent, leading from start to finish. C. Bull and P. Lannan were the stars. The score stood 52-14 in favor of Saanichton at the finish. The Saanichton boys are showing up good this season, not losing a game up to date.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Roberts spent the week-end at Cobble Hill.

Mr. Jack Lannan spent the week-end at home.
